Madrigals came to England in the 16th century. They provided private, informal entertainment at the castles and country homes of the landed gentry. Madrigals were songs written for small groups in which several voice parts were skillfully combined with each part being interesting and independent, both melodically and rhythmically. Today madrigal dinners are often presented as part of the Christmas season celebration.

The Madrigal Dinner will be directed by Paul K. Looney, director of Theatre Tuscaloosa and chairman of Shelton's department of theatre. He will be assisted by Linda Grote, chairman of the speech and Fine Arts Division, Syble Coats, Bethany Engle, Glinda Blackshear, Louise Crofton.

All profits from the Madrigal Dinner will go toward scholarships for Shelton's Speech and Fine Arts Division. For reservations contact Lucy Kubiszyn. Deadline for reservations is Thursday, December 7.
